

BONE MARROW DONORS WORLDWIDE

Seventeen years ago eight doctors and scientists decided to put all volunteer blood stem cell donors together in one large file called:

BONE MARROW DONORS WORLDWIDE

Bone Marrow Donors Worldwide (BMDW) represents the data of seventy-five organisations, who recruit volunteers willing to donate bone marrow to help patients with cancer and other lethal diseases.

Today the web based search engine has grown to more than 10 million donors, a proportion of whom have provided blood stem cells to more than 50,000 patients all over the world irrespective of their nationality or religion.

BMDW is a symbol of hope and a testimony of the goodwill of people in our world, united in their effort to provide life saving help to those who need it.

Jon J. van Rood
Chairman Editorial Board BMDW